

Vote for logo

DESIGN students at Swindon College have been competing to come up with a new logo for a new Swindon-based charity, Inner Flame. The students have undertaken the work as part of their second year of a Bachelors Degree in Graphic Design.

Inner Flame runs residential courses for teenagers, and wanted to have a logo that was designed by young people.

Belinda Armstrong, course leader, said "This was an ideal project for us, because it's an opportunity to work on a corporate identity that the students will see actually being used on a website and other marketing material."

Inner Flame's co-founder, Glenn Bridges, said: "The standard of entries was so high that we couldn't decide which one to use. So we've shortlisted four logos, and we want local young people to vote for which one they think is best."

BUDDING photography student Adrian Cox has been out and about capturing the effects of the recession in Swindon for the Student Adver.

The 16-year-old, who is studying archaeology, ancient history, and photography at New college, explained why he took photographs on this particular topic.

"The pictures around town showed all the different shops that have shut down due to the current crisis," he said.

More of Adrian's pictures can be seen at swindon.advertiser.co.uk/sapix.

"The pictures of the places in the snow, I took them because they had been untouched by anyone and looked so natural and beautiful," he said.

"And the shots of my friend writing something down, just looked to be an interesting action shot."

AT Greendown Secondary School a music workshop took place in one of their music rooms.

Brookfield, Peatmoor, Haydon Leigh, Westlea and Millbrook pupils took part. They had to learn about the music that took place in Africa. They watched a small film about African women performing a piece of music. They listened carefully to the rhythm and how they perform their music.

The teacher Mrs Few taught the class about the Greendown used for music lessons. They had a wide range of instruments including hand sonics.

Hand sonics are basically machines that when you hit them they make a different drum sound. They're drums but not drums if you get what I mean? Holly Hughes and Anahita Falaki from Peatmoor Community School both said they really enjoyed going on the hand sonics. Mrs Few said they all did very well. All the children enjoyed it!

THE Student Adver is proving a hit with children as far away as Kilmington in Devon.

Student teacher Christopher Tye, from Stratton, took copies to show Coley class (made up of years 4, 5 and 6) how children play a role in the news in Swindon.

Here's what they had to say about the Student Adver...

Devon knows, we love the Harry J: The Student Adver is interesting as it is about children our age.

In this paper I like the sport section as it is about different children playing the same sports but against teams we have never heard of.

Finlay Q: It is good to see a child's view of an event because it may be different to an article written to go in a normal paper.

Laura V: I like the way the children's stories are put in the paper. I like reading about the pupils progress and how they get on at school. I like the big bold and catchy

Victoria G: Children share their opinions about issues. I'd like information and pictures of our school in a newspaper telling people about our school and when we hold our Christmas show more people will know about it and come
